Copyright © 2020 InfoSpace Holdings, LLC, A Company System1 Energy rock music seems unsuitable for Christmas song fittings, but as this list shows, sometimes turns out to be a combination of victories. Whether it's a band covering or an artist expressing his own sentiments about this season, here are some songs that will make memories of your yuletide. Kevin Winter/Getty Images With a little tongue on the cheek, U2 turned the '60s girls Christmas girls song (Baby Please Come Home) into arena-rock singing. Bono fumbles the lyrics about getting stuck alone during the holidays while holding on to hope that someone special will arrive soon. Their version was released in 1987 around the time that U2 had begun their worldwide domination thanks to the Joshua Tree, and the song was a rarely mild moment from a very serious rockers at the time. One of the giddiest salutes to hold your childhood holiday spirit well into adulthood, A Great Big Sled Killer is pure happiness. I wanted to roll like a kid in the snow, declaring singer Brandon Flowers, and euphoric music never letting behind him. Pumpkin smashing is one of the most ethereal '90s' bands, so it makes sense that frontman Billy Corgan will be able to write a very beautiful Christmas song. His band always appreciates the importance of sincerity, and their Christmas is as heart-wing as you might expect. You can practically hear snow falling as Corgan pulls out flutes, stomachs, and strings for this majestic song. Ethan Miller/Getty Images For a short period in the mid-90s, Hootie & Blowfish provide good stone to the public. Giving perennial this Christmas presentation that is usually laid back, the band turned The Christmas Song into a comfortable ode, behind the porch to be close to the people you love during the holidays. The band deserve a lot of criticism they received during their career for being lightweight, but they are well equipped for such a comfortable song. Plus, singer Darius Rucker really has some nice pipes. Paul Hawthorne/Getty Images How do you maintain the spirit of a done-dead Christmas song while giving it fresh? Phantom Planet comes with a pretty good answer to that question with their version of Wonderland Winter. The Los Angeles indie-rock group added some grooves to one of the calmer songs of the season, and the result was a blatant, sunny rendition of the old favourite. James Minchin/Getty Images A B-side on single One Step Closer band. My December is one of the sad rock songs about the apparent loneliness people can feel during the holidays. Linkin Park singer Chester Bennington lamented that he had no one to share December with as he sat in the mansion, empty and snow fell outside. The music matches its stupidity—skeletal drumbeats and forlorn keyboards encompass cruelty in a way that's hard to shake. Kevin Winter / Images of Red Hot Chili Peppers decided to have fun with their classic ditty rendition of the House Deck. Goofing around and badly coavious off-key, band members performed impersonation of their holiday choir even though they realised they didn't actually all the words to the song they sing. What sad this is, slowball has to do with Christmas? I Will Stop Pretending to introduce us to the narrator who reflects on the former lover he left a long time ago. Now he wants to make amends even though it's been a few years since they spoke, and he doesn't know where he lives. But the melancholic cuts are deepening when we realize that it is Christmas Eve, an indication that perhaps the loneliness of the holidays finally makes the narrator look at the mistakes of its ways. Not to be confused with the traditional holiday ball of The Christmas Songs (Chestnuts roasted on open fire...), Dave Matthews Band Christmas Songs is a simple account of Jesus' life and death, encompassing Mary, Joseph, wise man, Last Supper, and Crucifixion Backed by a soulful acoustic guitar, Matthews flares in a warm voice Chung Sung-June/Getty Images Extreme, led by guitar pyrotechnics Nuno Bettencourt, conquered the charts with the 1991 saccharine ball more Than Words. A year later members of the group wrote one of the most sappiest, gushiest Christmas songs of all time. Piano firm, tossing backup vocals, lyrics about wanting the warmth of the Christmas season to last all year—Christmas Time Again has all the epic self-interest of celebrity charity records. But even if the track makes you roll your eyes, too much sentimentality can hit you exactly when you sweep in the spirit of Christmas. Image: Shutterstock Whether you've been drawn to a glam rock band famous for their big hair, more intense heads plunted by thrash metal bands or more popular stuff, the '80s produced rock songs that have stood the test of time. Regardless of your personal taste in music, we will match you with the '80s classic that really gets to the heart of who you are and what your life has been about. If your path has centered around the family and you get the greatest satisfaction from the fact that your children are loving and wonderful people, there's a jam from Guns N' Roses that we think is right in your hallway. Maybe you had to overcome many challenges and a series of seemingly endless obstacles on your path. If you just make it through tough times because of your rocks belief and spiritual deeds, there's a Bon Jovi song that's supposed to get right to the heart of things. If you're a fighter, someone who raises with any challenges and releases any chance to test your determination, you're probably just a massive fan of Rocky movies. We're guessing you've had a pretty good idea what a song is going to need. There are plenty of big rock songs from the decades that bring us the Trivial Pursuit and Strawberry Shortcake. We know which ones might as well have been written only for you.
